The graduate minor in Communication Studies requires 12 semester credit hours of advisor-approved COMM courses. A student who minors in Communication Studies should have completed at least 18 undergraduate hours of courses in communication studies (COMM). The department encourages communication studies minors to take courses from both rhetorical and behavioral perspectives to gain a broad perspective of the communication studies discipline. Students may take COMM courses as part of a resource or cognate area. Students who wish to take courses in communication studies that is not part of an approved minor should consult with the instructor of the course or the communication studies graduate advisor.
