DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY

Comal Building Room 102
Telephone: 512-245-2285 Fax: 512-245-8335
http://www.txstate.edu/philosophy

The graduate program, including the M.A. in Applied Philosophy and Ethics (MAAPE) and the Graduate Certificate in Professional Ethics, is central to the mission of the Philosophy Department and to our vision of its future. The MAAPE is a new and flourishing program, with over sixty students receiving their MA during its first six years. The MAAPE has become nationally and internationally competitive, attracting students from Arizona, Maine, Maryland, Georgia, California, Mexico, and Bangladesh, as well as from Texas.

We conceived of Applied Philosophy as philosophy engaged with other disciplines and the affairs and concerns of contemporary life. In research and in teaching the department emphasizes the relevance of philosophy to technology and engineering; mathematics, computer science, and disciplines in natural sciences; medicine; the social sciences; public policy; the humanities and arts; law; and everyday life. The Department has interdisciplinary ties through the participation of faculty members in the Honors College, the Center for Diversity and Gender Studies, the program in International Studies, the Certified Public Manager Program, the PhD in Materials Science, Engineering, and Commercialization, Physics, Women's Studies, Political Science, and the graduate program in Sustainability Studies. Additionally, the Department houses a growing program for research in, and teaching of, Responsible Conduct of Research Program.

The M.A. in Applied Philosophy and Ethics is designed to help students examine and discuss both contemporary and perennial problems. It includes courses in theoretical and methodological issues as well as public dialogue. The program can be completed in 14 months - over two summers and the academic year in between - and includes the opportunity to take courses outside of philosophy for those with interests in adjacent disciplines. The faculty is active, diverse, and pluralistic, representing a wide range of specialties and approaches to philosophy.

The faculty welcomes students with different goals. The program can serve as preparation for doctoral work in philosophy, but many students have other objectives. These include graduate study in adjacent fields, law, non-profit work, enhancing an existing career and personal enrichment. Hence, the faculty welcomes outstanding and dedicated students without a background in the discipline.

The graduate certificate in professional ethics will help you engage more fully with ethical issues in your professional life. This 12-hour certificate program will help you develop skills for analyzing and resolving ethical dilemmas in your professional life. The program emphasizes advanced critical thinking and writing skills, in-depth knowledge of the history, theory, principles and concepts of ethics, the ability to recognize and resolve ethical dilemmas, and the knowledge and skills necessary for ethical leadership.

Students may complete the certificate fully on-line, fully face-to-face, or through a mix of on-line and face-to-face courses.

Master of Arts (M.A.)

- Major in Applied Philosophy and Ethics (Non-thesis Option)
- Major in Applied Philosophy and Ethics (Thesis Option)

Minor

- Philosophy

Certificate

- Professional Ethics

The program emphasizes advanced critical thinking and writing skills, in-depth knowledge of the history, theory, principles and concepts of ethics, the ability to recognize and resolve ethical dilemmas, and the knowledge and skills necessary for ethical leadership.

Students may complete the certificate fully on-line, fully face-to-face, or through a mix of on-line and face-to-face courses.

Master of Arts (M.A.)

- Major in Applied Philosophy and Ethics (Non-thesis Option)
- Major in Applied Philosophy and Ethics (Thesis Option)

Minor

- Philosophy

Certificate

- Professional Ethics